

Telemedicine physicians connect you to care anywhere

Your telemedicine physicians are happy to connect with you from your home community through OTN.

Get to Know Dr. Evans

Dr. Andrea Evans

General Pediatrician, The Hospital for Sick Children & Telemedicine Specialist

“As a pediatrician, what I enjoy doing the most in my medical work is speaking to a child’s caregivers, teachers, nurse and community supports to discuss a child’s unique situation. Together we brainstorm how best to support the child. Every child and every community is incredibly unique. So, for me to do my job properly, it is the ideas and opinions of the child’s caregiver and surrounding supportive community that I have found to be the key in finding the best way to support a child.”

Dr. Evans divides her practice between the Northwest Territories and Nunavut, and The Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto.

Fun fact: Dr. Evans loves astronomy and is happiest when outside somewhere where she can see the Milky Way.

Timely access • Easy to use • Care sensitive to your needs

Contact your local health centre today to book a video visit with a telemedicine healthcare provider.

OTN, in partnership with KO eHealth, is expanding access to care in Indigenous communities through telemedicine. It’s used in on-reserve communities as well as aboriginal points of care.